From 19th February

The moon, in the morning,

Began, as they told, on the north of the town

Some sign, even from the door of the inn

Well the old girl and the boy, and much

Is sure that the news of the morning Is true.

She, who's been across the hill, to tell

All that she knows in her home...
I'm not sure what you're trying to say. The text appears to be a mix of letters and numbers, but it doesn't form a coherent sentence or message. If you could provide more context or clarify your intentions, I'd be happy to help further.
