An action of the Allied Forces in Greece.

The action of the Allied Forces in Greece was a series of military operations carried out by the British, Greek, and allied forces against the Axis powers during the Second World War. The operations aimed to defend Greece against German and Italian invasion forces. The battle began with the German invasion of Crete on May 20, 1941, and continued with the Battle of Greece, culminating in the Battle of Greece and the Battle of Crete. The Allied forces faced significant challenges, including shortages of supplies and equipment, and were ultimately forced to evacuate Greece on July 7, 1941. The action of the Allied Forces in Greece marked a significant turning point in the war, and the loss of Greece to the Axis powers had far-reaching consequences for the region and the course of the war.
